

You are certified by the Canadian Institute of Public Health Inspectors and possess a baccalaureate degree in environmental health. Public health inspectors are responsible for inspections of various premises such as restaurants, bakeries, daycares, public pools and spas, long term care facilities, tattoo parlours and hair salons in order to ensure that these premises are in compliance with relevant legislation, occasionally in conjunction with other agencies such as the Canadian Food Inspection Agency, Ministry of the Environment, Ministry of Agriculture Food and Rural Affairs and Ministry of Labour. Public health inspectors are also responsible for the investigation of communicable disease outbreaks, potential rabies exposures and health hazard investigations, utilizing effective risk assessment skills. On occasion, these activities will require the public health inspector to work outside of normal business hours including rotating on-call work on weekends.

Public health inspectors may also be called upon to provide expert testimony in court and are also involved in issuing tickets and orders in order to enforce compliance with relevant public health legislation. Consequently, thoroughness of note taking for evidence is essential. Public health inspectors are responsible for the provision of educational programs to educate businesses and the general public on good public health practises and effective public speaking skills are essential. The successful candidate will be responsible for the provision of comprehensive environmental health programs in the Region.
